PRINCESS ZARA

| addresses to the Emperor, and was as Synopsis of Chapters Already Published Princess Zara de Echeverla, of St.
Petersburg, visits New York. She is met upon her arrival by Alexis Saberevski, who tells her that her connection with the ni-Pilists is known. Next day she sails for Russia. The story is then taken up by Daniel Derrington. Upon the advice of Saberevski he offers his services to the Czar, who makes him head of the Fraternity of Silence to suppress nihilism. A captured spy tells him many of their secrets and he is planning a grand coup when he is invited to the home of Princess Zara. It is a case of love at first sight with him, but he overhears a conversation that shows she is leader of the nihilists. She pleads with him to wait till next day before taking any action, and he promises. That night an attempt is made to murder him. He goes to Zara and accuses her of being its instigator.
She denies it, but admits that he has been condemned to death by the nihilists.
Her agitation betrays her love for him and they plan to leave Russia together.
She says, however, that he cannot leave the house unless he takes the nihilistic oath, as it is surrounded by men waiting to kill him. She also tells how she became a nihilist through the dishotored death of a girl friend and the latter's brother, who was her own flance, through the machinations of the Czar and Captain Durnief, one of his officers. Derrington, who goes by the mame of Dubravnik, refuses to take any nihilistic oath, and finally persuades Zara to allow him to send a cipher message for aid. In answer to his note, men arrive, who arrest not only those outside the house, but Zara and Derrington, too. They are taken to prison, but enter by one door only to leave by another, and Derrington takes Zara to the home of Prince Michael. a friend of the Czar, where he leaves her.

Derrington then persudaes Zara's brother to give up nitilism to save his sister, and makes final preparations to arrest all the nihilists of the city that night. He then addresses to the Emperor, and was as follows:

You have ere this been informed and supplied with ample proof, that I am among the ranks of your enemies, the nihilists. I confess it, but I became one of them for selfish motives, not for political ones. Never mind that. It is not my intention to intercede for mercy, for I know that your heart is a stranger to that quality. It is to tell you a truth that you should know. It is to tell you that the one most dangerous of all nihilists is to go free; is to remain in Russia; is to have access to your palace; is spared by your trusted spy, Dubravnik; is upheld by him. This nihilist to whom I refer, has been, ever since the death of my one-time rival. Stanislaus, the most dangerous of all the extremists. This nihilist leader is a woman, and her name is Zara de Echeveria. Dubravnik will spare her; he will spare her brother who is as violent as she is.

"Well," demanded his "what have you to say?" "Nothing." "Nothing."

"Nothing:"
"No."
"Have you arrested her?"
"I have not."
"Where is she now?"
"In her own home, I took here there this morning. Listen for a moment, and I will tell you how that occurred."
Then I related in detail the story of my struggle with Durnief, the rescue of Zara, her heroism in assisting me, and I told of the final capture and imprisonment of the captain. But his majesty shook his head in a doubt.
"I believe Durnief's letter. She is a nihilist," he said. "She must be arrested." I shook my head, but he did not see the motion, and continued: "I believe that the princess is the friend to whom poor Michael referred. He was in love with her, and nothing short of the love of a woman could have made him disloyal to me. Yes, I believe that she is what Durnief says she is. I order you to place her under arrest at fuses to listen to what he has been doing. The Czar, too, is angry with Derrington, but the latter defies him, tells him the truth of what re has been doing, and finding that Michaet has sworn out a warrant for his arrest and has sent Captain Durnief to bring Zara to the palace, he denounces them both, deciaring that they have taken the nihilist oath. Michael's agitation betrays that his is true, and the Czar orders him to his room, to remain until sent for. That night the nihilists are all arrested, and Derrington is returning home, when he sees a carriage dashing by and catches a glimpse of Zara's face within in. He shoots the horses, bringing the vehicle to a standstill. He finds Captain Durnief in it, attempting to abduct Zara. The men fight a strapge duel, and finally, with Zara's help, Derrington overcomes the Russian and take: Zara back to the "Yes," I replied, "I dare to disobey uch an order as that. It shall not be." There was that sneering smile upon his face now, but I held my ground, "I am not a traitor, but I will not carry out your request, and I will not permit it to be carried out." The program was opened with an address of welcome by Alexander B. Garden, president of the brotherhood. The Rev. George M. Cummings, the pastor, delivered the invocation, after which the audience wang "My Country, 'Tis of Thee." A vocal solo, "The Banderillo," by Ed. Callow followed. Violin selections were played by Messrs. Carbury and Swindells. Sketches of the life of Washington were given by L. W. If I had other friends like you, who dared to tell me the ruth as it is, and not distort it out of all recognition—if there were others here windared to defy me when defiance alone will make me see things in their right light, Russia would be the better for it. Go to Zara de Echeveria. Tell her that I wish her to come here. Tell her that the Czar of Russia will ask her forgiveness for an act that he could not avoid committing. She will understand. Then he put his arms around me in Russian fashion and bade me go.

There was a pistol beside him on the floor where it had fallen from his nerveless grasp after the fatal deed was performed, but he reclined as easily in the chair as though he had dropped asleep naturally, for a short nap instead of forever.

"Poor Michael!" I murmured. "Did I drive you to this? Would that I had not spoken.

I turned to glance around the room, professional instinct getting the best of me even in that moment of sorrow, and I quickly espiel a letter upon the table. It was addressed to his majesty, the Emperor, and was tightly scaled, so I placed it in my pocket and started to leave the room. At the door I met the captain of the guard with two of his men, and them I instructed to keep watch, but on no account to touch anything without his majesty's permission. Then I sought the Czar.

"Well Derrington?" he asked, as soon as I was admitted to his presence. "What of the night? Is the conspiracy crushed, and have you been successful?" "Entirely so. Clarence Hall and Jesse Sturtevant, each about fifteen years old, were members of a party of colored youths who gathered in a stable on U street last evening, when an altercation arose. During the argument Hall was stabbed with a small knife, his head and left arm being cut. According to the report made to the Anacostia police, the cutting was done by Sturtevant, who could not be found when the policemen arrived on the scene.

Hall was bleeding from his wounds and the police sent him to the Casualty Hospital in the patrol wagon of the Eleventh precinct. His condition was not serious. Members of the Anacostia force took up the search for Sturtevant, who was thought to have escaped by way of Garfield.
